

THE “CORE PURPOSE” OF SURE START CHILDREN’S CENTRES

GOVERNMENT VISION:

The Government believes that children’s centres should have a clear core purpose, focused on

1. Improving outcomes for young children and their families, with a particular focus on the most disadvantaged families, in order to reduce inequalities in:

- child development and school readiness;

Supported by improved:

- parenting aspirations, self esteem¹ and parenting skills;
- child and family health and life chances.

CO-PRODUCED DESCRIPTION OF HOW THE CORE PURPOSE CAN BE ACHIEVED:

The Government has worked with sector leaders to consider evidence and good practice, resulting in a co-produced description of how the core purpose can be achieved, by:

- Assessing need across the local community
- Providing access to universal early years services in the local area including high quality and affordable early years education and childcare
- Providing targeted evidence based early interventions for families in greatest need, in the context of integrated services
- Acting as a hub for the local community, building social capital and cohesion.
- Sharing expertise with other early years settings to improve quality.

SECTOR-LED PRINCIPLES:

Sector Leaders believe that all children’s centre activity should be underpinned by the principles of:

- Respecting and engaging parents
- Working in partnership across professional/agency boundaries

Each of these areas is explained in more detail below.

1. Improving outcomes for young children and their families, and reducing inequalities.

This is the overall aim of children's centres. The purpose around which children's centres should frame their activities is to identify, reach and help the families in greatest need to support:

- Child development and school readiness - supporting communication, behavioural, emotional and social and physical development, through all stages of development from pre-birth to age 5, so children develop as confident and curious learners, able to benefit from the transition to school.²
- Parenting aspirations and parenting skills - building on strengths and supporting aspirations, so that parents and carers are able to give their child³ the best start in life.
- Child and family health and life chances - promoting good physical and mental health for both children and their family; safeguarding; supporting parents to improve the skills that enable them to access education, training and employment; and addressing risk factors⁴ so that children and their families are safe, free from poverty and able to improve both their immediate wellbeing and their future life chances.

2. Assessing strengths and need across the area to inform local commissioning of services

This means children's centres influencing local strategic needs assessments, and commissioning decisions taken forward by the local authority, in partnership with the Health and Wellbeing Board. This joint approach involves sharing data and assessing strengths and need across the local community to identify gaps and opportunities. This would inform a local, integrated offer of access to services through each children's centre, which ensures funding and resources are aimed at those in greatest need. Evidence suggests that where certain frameworks are used to assess need and plan services, outcomes improve (e.g. Outcomes Based Accountability, or Common Language). It will require: information-sharing and assessment of the needs of individual families at greatest risk of poor outcomes, for example, through use of the CAF; and the PREview tool; active use of rich local data and knowledge; and, collaboration with local partners particularly health visitors, social workers and other agencies. It will require children's centre leaders to assess what services already exist locally and decide what evidence suggests about which additional services are needed to improve outcomes for all parts of the local community but particularly for those with the greatest needs.

3. Providing access to high quality universal (available to all families who wish to use them) services in the area

The statutory definition of a children's centre includes making available early childhood services. These services for young children and their families (defined in Section 2 of the Childcare Act 2006) are: childcare; social services functions; health services; employment support and information and advice. Children's centres must provide access to these services or have them on site. All children's centres must directly provide some activities for young children, for example 'stay and play' sessions and drop in groups. It will sometimes be appropriate to charge those who can afford to pay for some of these services.

¹Self- efficacy is the outcome for measurement purposes. Self-esteem is used as a widely understood term

²Exact definitions to be confirmed following EYFS consultation and Sure Start definition of the neediest families.

Evidence suggests that the following universal services (ie available to all families who wish to make use of them) make a difference to children and families, when delivered in an integrated manner:

- i) High quality, inclusive, early learning and childcare, particularly for disadvantaged families or those with particular needs (for example disabled children) or in disadvantaged areas. This includes supporting families to access the offer of free early learning for 2 year olds, support for childminder networks and sessional and crèche facilities appropriate to meet local need. Where early learning and childcare is delivered by the children's centre (or by a third party on behalf of the children's centre), it should be supported by someone with either Qualified Teacher or Early Years Professional status.
- ii) Information and activities for families, so that parents can make informed choices. This will include provision of family activities to improve outcomes (for example, learning through play or healthy eating) and could involve access to wider sources of support for example benefit or debt advice.
- iii) Adult learning and employment support; this may include language, literacy and numeracy support, family learning, access to apprenticeships and volunteering opportunities as steps toward employment and links to Jobcentre Plus. It is supported by good quality, inclusive childcare.
- iv) Integrated child and family health services; to include Health Visitors delivering the Healthy Child programme, engagement with midwives and GPs and use of the Family-Nurse partnership where appropriate.

In good children's centres, these universal activities bring in many of the families in need of extra support. As families build up confidence and relationships with staff and other service users they may become more receptive to appropriate targeted activities.

4. Using evidence-based approaches to deliver targeted, family-centred support

This means children's centres combining evidence with professional expertise – in order to decide which early interventions work best for local families, and help ensure families receive the services they really need and that will make a difference to their lives. The following targeted services can make a difference for families with the greatest needs:

- i. Parenting and family support, including outreach work and relationship support (the quality of the relationship between parents is linked to positive parenting and better outcomes for children). Provision of integrated support in response to identified strengths and risk factors within individual families.
- ii. Targeted evidence-based early intervention programmes (such as those recommended by Graham Allen MP, the NAPR and C4EO) where published evaluation demonstrates that particular interventions can help families make accelerated progress in improving outcomes where they are at greatest risk of falling furthest behind.

- iii. Links with specialist services for families where there are the most complex health or social care needs (eg disabled children, children with major health difficulties, or children likely to be “in need” or where there are safeguarding concerns as in the Children Act 1989)

This list of services (under 3 and 4) links to the “full core offer” children’s centres have focused on up to now, but rather than providing a detailed list of services for all children’s centres to deliver (as with the current core offer), it sets a framework to support local assessment of need and delivery of services. Although overall less detailed and prescriptive, it includes increased emphasis on family-centred support, including relationship. It puts an emphasis on children’s centres thinking innovatively about the range of services they might provide.

5. Acting as a hub for the local community, building social capital and cohesion.

This will involve children’s centres capitalising on their role as a welcoming environment for families, for example by welcoming older people’s groups to use the facility for community activities or by supporting siblings or older children’s activities where this is appropriate locally. It is about children’s centres using their facilities creatively so the whole community can benefit and using the skills within the community to the benefit of the children’s centre. (eg members of the community volunteering their skills). It links to the Health Visitor Building Community Capacity work and the Health Visitor Early Implementer Sites.

6. Sharing expertise with other early years settings to improve quality.

This is not about taking on the quality improvement role of the Local Authority but could involve sharing expertise, brokering relationships, sharing (and learning from) good practice, support for childminding networks, shared training and joint planning. National College are developing work in this area.

7. Respecting and engaging parents

Respecting the views and wishes of all parents, with local families at the heart of inclusive decision making. This may involve a role for parents in governance. It will involve local families a greater say in how services are delivered (with transparency about what money is being spent on and what difference it is making), actively engaging them in delivery through volunteering opportunities, as well as working with health visitors to build the capacity of local parents to help each other and form informal networks of support.

8. Partnership working

The core purpose puts an onus on a cross-sector approach and effective local partnerships, particularly between social workers, health visitors and children’s centre outreach workers, so that vulnerable families are supported into appropriate interventions. Reducing child poverty and increasing social mobility Centres will also work with a range of other partners to help them deliver this core purpose for example other early years providers, Jobcentre Plus, GP consortia, information and advice organisations, schools and voluntary and community sector organisations.
