Application of synthetic phonic knowledge and skills

Tehniyat is segmenting words to spell and writing corresponding graphemes. Not all grapheme–phoneme correspondences are known at this stage; she has written the CVCC word 'went' and made a phonemically plausible attempt at 'doctor', shown here as 'dct', indicating that she is not yet able to hear all the phonemes within words she attempts to write.

Tehniyat sample 3

Application of synthetic phonic knowledge and skills

Tehniyat makes phonemically plausible attempts for polysyllabic words, for example, 'panapul' for 'pineapple'. There is evidence of plausible attempts for 'eat' shown as 'eet', 'walk' shown as 'wuk'. Furthermore, she has spelt the tricky word 'my' correctly and the CVC word 'mum'.
